

You can fill it with drawings, writing or cut out images to document your feelings on a particular issue. Some questions you could consider & respond to:

How are you feeling right now?
 Is there something that you're worrying about?
 Or something you feel excited about?

Amy Sillman describes a zine as
 "a fast & furious form of public/private address."

Using the instructions provided here, create your own MINI ZINE

MAKE A MINI ZINE

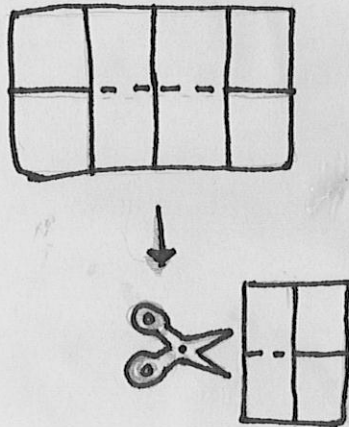

Fold an A4 sheet of paper in half along the short vertical (to A5 size) and then fold in half again.

Open the sheet back up, then fold along the long horizontal.

THESE ARE YOUR
8 PAGES

Fold to A5 again, then cut from the folded edge half-way into the page (along the dashed lines on this example).

Now you can number the pages of your zine.

The back of the A4 sheet can be used for a poster design.

Fold the A4 until the middle cut-out section pops into a diamond shape. Then push the pages together.

NOW YOU HAVE A
ZINE!
HURRAY!
